Democracy, Race, Social Class, and Black Spirituality

We are thrilled to welcome Rev. Dr. Randal Maurice Jelks to First Presbyterian on September 11, for a time of discussion on democracy, race, social class, and Black spirituality. Randal Maurice Jelks is a professor, a documentary producer, and award-winning author. He was an executive producer of the documentary I, Too, Sing America: Langston Hughes Unfurled and he currently teaches American Studies, African Studies, and African American Studies at the University of Kansas. His writings have appeared in the Boston Review and the Los Angeles Review of Books, and he serves as co-editor of the academic journal American Studies.

Please join us for two sessions:

Discussion of Dr. Jelks' latest book, Letters to Martin: Meditations on Democracy in Black America Montieth Hall at 11 a.m.

Letters to Martin: Meditations on Democracy is an exploration of democracy through the lens of the histories of Black Protestants in their efforts to build a more inclusive society. Dr. Jelks believes that all persons should explore the spiritual roots of democracy through the experience of Black freedom struggles, which birthed persons from Sojourner Truth to Martin Luther King, Jr. Books will be available for purchase and Dr. Jelks will be available to sign them.

Race, Social Class, and Presbyterians* Social Hall at 4 p.m.

This talk explores why Presbyterian Churches are often not inclusive places of community, and the ways that the church can open themselves up to all people, but particularly Black Americans. Dr. Jelks will refer to the suggested reading:
